Introduction

Our Financial Assessment was created based on the information and data you provided. This report is designed to provide you with the information resources you need to meet your financial goals and needs effectively and efficiently. Estimates, projections, and figures contained in this review are only approximations based on mathematical calculations. Taking this information as absolute may adversely affect your current financial position.

This financial analysis is intended to act as a guide to improving your current financial situation and the recommendations provided are a starting point for managing your finances. Falcon Wealth provides one to two meetings with our Certified Financial Planners at no cost. Financial planning is a continuous series of decisions and changes to these actions to achieve your outstanding goals.

Our Certified Financial Planner practitioners are only one section of your personal finance and should work alongside your Certified Public Accountant and Estate Attorney. Portions of this report may be based directly or indirectly on generally accepted tax and estate principles. These underlying assumptions are always subject to change. For these reasons, independent tax and legal counsel are suggested.

Areas of Concern

Focus Areas for Planning

Cash Flow Planning

Coordination of tax planning, investment management and cash flow needs will be required.

- Withdrawal rate to fund ₱288,000 of annual retirement income, plus tax and cost-of-living adjustments, should be monitored throughout retirement.

Recommended Strategy:

- Cash flow projections are needed to determine potential shortfalls and develop strategies to ensure lifetime income needs are met.
 - Determine minimum rate of return needed on investments to meet cash flow needs.
 - Determine maximum “safe” spending levels to ensure lifetime income needs will be met and mitigate risk of depleting assets.
 - Determine impact of taxes on cash flow.
 - Determine impact of inflation on cash flow.
 - Determine optimal timing and structure for Social Security benefits, and coordinate this with tax strategies and cash flow needs.
 - Evaluate pension distribution options to determine optimal choice for your retirement circumstances.
- Ongoing monitoring of cash flow may be needed to adjust strategies as changes in tax liability, investment returns, and expenses warrant.

Tax Planning

A comprehensive strategy and active tax management are needed to reduce current and future tax burden.

- Current structure of retirement assets lacks tax diversification.
 - Majority of investment portfolio may be taxed as ordinary income upon withdrawal.
 - Likelihood of future tax increases warrants further consideration.
- Portfolio allocation lacks tax efficiency.
 - Equities should be weighted non-qualified accounts, with fixed income assets weighted in qualified accounts to optimize tax treatment.
- Planning to reduce tax impact related to Required Minimum Distributions at age 73 is needed.

Recommended Strategy:

- Develop Roth IRA conversion strategy.
 - Tax projections are needed to determine timing and amount of Roth conversions.
 - Evaluate a multiple year strategy.
- Restructure investments in portfolio to optimize tax treatment upon accumulation & withdrawal.
- Determine sources of income from a tax standpoint (tax free, ordinary income, and capital gain tax) to structure a tax-efficient income stream.

$ Investment Management: $7,319,000

Recommended Strategy:

- Develop a diversified, tax-efficient portfolio to provide for cash flow needs and mitigate the impact of future inflation.
 - Utilization of institutional index funds is favored; use of regular index funds and ETFs can be utilized where institutional funds are not optimal for a specific asset class.
 - Incorporate use of 12 -20 asset classes, in percentages contingent upon rate of return required per cash flow analysis:

US Holdings		International Holdings	Fixed Income
Large Cap Value	Small Cap Value	Development Markets	Short Term (ST) Bonds
Large Cap Growth	Small Cap Growth	Large/Mid/Small Cap Growth	US Treasuries
Mid Cap Value	Tilts - Energy	Large/Mid/Small Cap Value	Private Debt
Mid Cap Growth	Tilts - Real Estate	Diversified Emerging Markets	International ST Bonds

- Consolidate assets where possible for cost reduction and improved management of asset classes and portfolio risk.
- Consider an in-service distribution on a 401(k) plan if plan permits this.
- Monitor portfolio regularly and rebalance as needed to ensure investments are within defined parameters for performance and risk management, relative to cash flow needs and tax status.

Current Strategy: A comprehensive investment strategy has not been developed to replace earned income

1. Asset allocation and diversification are not optimal.
2. Existing portfolios lack some of the asset classes required for adequate diversification.
3. Reduced risk in portfolio may be desirable as protection of assets and cash flow become primary considerations.

Liquid Asset Composition:

Cash and Bonds	$1,300,000
----------------	-------------

Managed Assets:

	$6,019,000
1) Stocks, Mutual Funds, Index Funds, and ETF Holdings	$6,018,000

Average Fund Fees	0.04%

Turnover & Other Trading Costs	0.12%
--------------------------------	-------

Individual stocks affect turnover & expense ratios*

Management Fee	0.01%
----------------	-------

Creates unnecessary fees & taxes ; fund managers looking for short term gains.*

Currently, there does not appear to be an active allocation strategy.

Approximate total annual fund fees:	0.17%

! Risk Management

Potential risks to cash flow and assets exist and need further analysis to determine appropriate strategy.

- Impact of premature death should be addressed.
- Potential need for long term care and related costs should be addressed.
- Potential shortfalls in homeowners, auto, and liability coverage may exist.

Recommended Strategy:

Premature Death

Analysis of impact of premature death on short-term and long-term cash flow needs is needed to determine life insurance needs.

- Loss of salary due to premature death warrants further consideration.
- Coverage options warrant further consideration once insurance needs are determined..

Long-term Care

Analysis of existing long-term care coverage is needed to determine potential shortfalls in coverage and develop strategy for contingency planning.

- Cash reserves
- Equity in home
- Help from family members

Homeowners and Insurance Policies

Homeowners and auto policies should be reviewed to ensure competitiveness of premiums and that adequate coverage is in place.

- Cost per square foot for dwelling coverage
- Liability limits
- Deductibles

Umbrella Liability Policy

Umbrella liability policy should be considered to protect assets from personal liability claims.

- Liability coverage on auto and home policies is likely insufficient to protect assets from catastrophic events.

Estate Planning

Existing estate plan and related trust documents may need review and updates to ensure the following goals are met:

- Protection of assets from probate.
- Viability of Power of Attorneys and health care related documents in the event of incapacitation.
- Reduce or eliminate estate taxes, capital gains taxes, and income taxes related to inheritance.

Recommended Strategy:

- Review current living trust to ensure property and non-qualified assets are not subject to probate and potential adverse tax consequences, and that issues related to health care and finances are carried out according to your wishes. The following documents should be reviewed and updated:

- Verify bank accounts and investment accounts are titled under the trust to avoid probate and ensure a step-up in basis upon the death.
- Beneficiaries on retirement accounts should be reviewed and updated to ensure proper titling and that stretch provisions are maximized.
- Beneficiaries on life insurance policies should be reviewed for accuracy.

Areas of Concern:

Temporary Liquidity Problem at Death

Upon your passing, there are many expenses your family will have to incur including funeral and burial expenses and costs associated with court, titling, and probate and family issues. Your assets may not be accessible to your family as quickly as they are needed. The Social Security burial benefit only contributes $255, far less than the average funeral and burial expenses of $15,000. To plan for this temporary liquidity problem, consider two options:

Set aside an adequate amount of money to cover final expenses including medical expenses, legal bills and unpaid debts.

Purchase final expense insurance to cover funeral and burial expenses (estimated to be $15,000 on average)

Areas of Concern:

Update Your Estate Plan

A properly designed and executed estate plan can ensure that your assets and desires are carried out upon your departure. When establishing an estate plan, choose an attorney that is counseling-oriented rather than document-oriented. The attorney should be willing to work in conjunction with your financial advisor, CPA and other trusted advisors. When developing your estate plan, your attorney will help you understand the legal and tax requirements of transferring wealth. In addition, the estate planning process will address:

- Education funding for children and grandchildren
- Philanthropic goals
- Succession planning of family business
- Providing for the surviving spouse
- The complexities of the family relationships due to second marriages
- Special family issues and disputes

For more complex estates, financial, tax and insurance advisors may be required to ensure that appropriate financial assets are allocated and funded correctly, offer necessary valuations, and tax returns, and provide the means for proper balance within the plan.

Estate planning is an ongoing process that should be reviewed throughout your life. It is recommended that you involve your family members so that they are aware of what will happen upon your death.

Areas of Concern:

Update Your Will

Your will is a living document that requires your attention. As your life circumstances change, it is imperative to update your will to reflect these changes. If any of the following have occurred since the last revision, it is time to consult with your attorney:

- Birth or adoption of a child/grandchild
- Change in marital status
- Death of someone named in your will
- Children have reached the age of 18
- A change in the circumstances of your executor, guardians, trustees, etc.
- You would like to provide for a charitable or other organization
- A significant increase or decrease in the value of your estate
- You have started a business
- A change in tax laws
- You are approaching the age at which you are required to begin taking distributions from your IRA, 401(k), or other qualified plan (usually 73 years old)
- You have moved out of state
- It has been three years or more since you have reviewed your will
- You have acquired or disposed of a significant asset such as a house or business
- A witness to your original will has died or can't be located

Remember, your will should evolve with your life and its changing circumstances to ensure your wishes are followed after you depart.

Areas of Concern:

Update Your Trust

A trust is created when one person (the trustor or grantor) transfers assets to another person or a corporation (the trustee) to be held for the benefit of himself or others (the beneficiaries). Generally, it is a good idea to establish a trust if you have children or significant assets. We encourage you to consult your attorney about establishing a trust if the following situations apply to you:

You have a financial interest in a business

- You have beneficiaries under the age of 25
- You have special needs children with physical or mental disabilities
- You have been married multiple times
- You are on bad terms with any of your heirs
- A family member needs creditor protection
- A family member is bad at managing money
- You own real estate of any value in more than one state
- Your estate value is close to or above $1,000,000

Trusts are recommended because they are not subject to probate and all the fees associated with the process. In addition, it keeps family matters out of public record which occurs when an estate goes through probate. A trust also provides professional management for a trustor if he becomes incompetent or disabled. Finally, it enables trustees to collect life insurance proceeds immediately upon the death of the trustor and use the proceeds, if permitted by the trust, to care for family members without a court delay.

While trusts are generally favorable, there are some disadvantages of establishing a trust. When a trust is established, it requires you to transfer assets into the trust, which can be a time-consuming process. A trust usually requires higher attorney fees in comparison to a will and may charge ongoing administrative fees. One final disadvantage is that upon death of the trustor, creditors may not be cut off as quickly as they are in probated estates.

Areas of Concern:

Update Your Durable Power Of Attorney

A power of attorney is a written document which one person (the principal) uses to empower another person to act on his or her behalf. Establishing a durable power of attorney ensures that someone you trust (usually called your agent or attorney-in-fact) will manage financial responsibilities that will arise if you become incapacitated. This includes handling bills, bank deposits, properties sales, insurance, and benefits paperwork. In addition, this person has the power to:

- Buy, sell, or lease assets
- Sue on the principal's behalf
- Collect from creditors
- Change provisions in a living trust
- Operate the principal's business
- Make gifts to the spouse (to equalize the estates) and to children, grandchildren, etc. (to utilize the annual gift tax exclusions)
- Make disclaimers
- Create living trusts to benefit the principal, spouse, and heirs
- Complete transfers to a living trust if the principal becomes incompetent
- Join the competent spouse in signing income and gift tax returns
- Exercise special powers of appointment

If you don't designate a durable power of attorney and become incapacitated, a judge will have to name someone to manage your affairs. The person appointed to manage your finances is called a conservator or guardian of the estate. This person the court chooses may not be the person you would have chosen. In addition, proceedings to name a conservator or guardian can be expensive and embarrassing for your family. The court proceeding makes private affairs a matter of public record for anyone to access. It is not uncommon for family disputes to arise during the proceedings which cause legal fees to mount up. Consult an attorney if you do not have a Power of Attorney in place.

Areas of Concern:

Update Your Medical Power Of Attorney

It is important to ensure that your Medical Power of Attorney has been updated to comply with The Federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA).

Update Your Quality Of Life Directive

It is vital that you complete a Quality of Life Directive since it provides comprehensive instructions on your life and health quality desires. By providing your agent for your Medical Power of Attorney with a Quality of Life directive, you are giving the decision makers direction on how to make health care decisions under complex circumstances. A Quality of Life Directive helps direct decisions when it comes to:

- Pain Control
- Life Prolonging Treatment
- The Effect of Health Care on Finances
- Your Medical Treatment Preferences
- Your Religious and Spiritual Beliefs
- Your thoughts on Quality vs. Length of Life
- Your wishes about Organ Donation

All these issues can be stressful and may cause disputes among family members. By addressing them through your Quality of Life Directive you will make your health care desires clearly known so that interpretations are minimized.

Areas of Concern:

Umbrella Liability Protection

Legal liability is perhaps the largest financial risk most individuals face. Common accidents such as an automobile collision can result in lawsuits with enormous damage awards. Without liability insurance, your family could face a financial disaster due to an unintentional incident. Liability insurance is designed to cover an insured for acts of negligence that create a legal obligation to a third party. There are several types of policies that cover typical liabilities including homeowner's insurance, automobile insurance and umbrella insurance.

Homeowner's Insurance

Liability coverage under a homeowner's policy is provided in one of three sections:

- Personal liability – Payments the insured is legally obligated to make because of bodily injury or property damage.
- Medical payments to others – Medical expenses of injured third parties.
- Additional coverage – Expenses incurred by the insured in the event of bodily injury or property damage.

Automobile Insurance

Liability coverage under an automobile policy is provided in one of two sections.

- Automobile liability – Payments the insured is legally obligated to make because of bodily injury or property damage due to an auto accident.
- Medical payments – Medical or funeral expenses payable because of bodily injury.

Umbrella Liability Insurance

Umbrella liability insurance is designed for situations where potential liability exceeds the limits of protection covered in other typical policies. Those with significant assets or practicing in certain professions should consider umbrella insurance since they are more at risk due to their perceived ability to pay more in damages. Umbrella insurance covers the liability in excess of the limits of other policies such as homeowner's and auto insurance up to a specified amount. In addition, it broadens protection for an individual since it generally has fewer exclusions than other standard policies.

Areas of Concern:

Assets May Not Be Titled Correctly

Your assets may not be properly titled due to some possible scenarios:

- You have a trust, but your trust is not listed on the titling of assets
- You have assets jointly held with your children
- You have assets jointly held with your spouse
- There is no Transfer on Death (TOD) or Pay on Death (POD) indicated on accounts

Transfer on Death

Transfer on Death (TOD) registration allows you to pass the securities you own directly to another person or entity, known as the TOD Beneficiary, upon your death without having to go through probate. By setting up your account this way, the executor of your estate will not have to take action to transfer the securities to the intended beneficiaries. There are steps that the TOD beneficiaries must take in order to re-register the securities upon your death.

Beneficiary Designations

Beneficiary designations determine who receives the assets at death. You are allowed to name substitute beneficiaries for your assets if the primary beneficiary were not to survive the owner. Lineal Descendants per stirpes may also be substitute beneficiaries.

TOD registration is an estate planning tool generally used in smaller estates that will not have estate tax issues or in situations where single estate owner will pass all assets to a single beneficiary. We advise you to consult an estate planning attorney regarding and decisions about the use of the TOD designation.

Consequences

If you do not title your assets correctly, your beneficiaries will not be able access your assets at a time they are need most. Your assets will be forced to go through probate, which is a hassle for your family due to the long and costly process. While the transfer of your assets is being delayed, the institution that holds the assets at the time of your death continues to hold them through the entire probate process costing your loved one's additional fees.

Areas of Concern:

Beneficiaries May Not Be Titled Correctly

It is a common misconception that qualified retirement plans (IRA, 401(k), etc.), life insurance and annuities are distributed the same way as a will or trust upon passing. This is not the case. They are distributed according to the Beneficiary Designation you complete for each. It is extremely important that you regularly review your beneficiaries for your retirement plans, life insurance and annuities since a large portion of your assets are in such accounts and even a small mistake could be devastating to your family members.

Even though you may think you know who your beneficiaries are, it is a good idea to conduct a review to ensure that your assets will be transferred to the appropriate people. It is easy to make a mistake on the paperwork or omit a beneficiary. If you have divorced since designating a beneficiary, you need to change the beneficiary. Unless you file a Change of Beneficiary, your ex-spouse will remain the primary beneficiary.

Don't make the mistake of assuming that if you don't name a beneficiary, your retirement plan, life insurance or annuity will be distributed to your estate. There are some plans and policies that pass to your estate in the event there is no beneficiary, but others provide a list of people who will receive the proceeds in order of priority (spouse, children, etc.). There are never default provisions for payment to a surviving domestic partner unless specifically designated on the Beneficiary Form. If you name your estate as the beneficiary, there are negative income tax consequences that could be avoided. Have a professional review your beneficiaries so that your wishes are carried through upon your passing.

Areas of Concern:

Tax Diversification:

There are several ways to develop a tax efficient investment strategy to create more flexibility in managing your taxes in the future. To develop a tax efficient investment strategy, it is essential to understand the three broad categories of income taxes: Taxable, Tax-Deferred and Tax-Free

Taxable Investments

Investing after-tax dollars in money market accounts, stocks, bonds, and mutual funds can create a source of partially taxable dollars at retirement.

Advantages of this type of investment include:

- Potential capital gain tax rate (0%-15%) (held more than one year)
- Can offset capital gains with capital losses
- Provides liquidity
- There are no contributions limits
- There is a large diversity of investment options
- Heirs receive a step up in basis

Disadvantages of Taxable investments include:

- Taxes generally cannot be deferred
- Investments are not tax deductible
- Accrued interest and dividends maybe taxable

Tax-Deferred Investments

Maximizing pre-tax savings into tax qualified retirement accounts like 401(k) plans, IRAs, and 403(b) plans create a tax-deferred source of income at retirement.

Tax Diversification:

Tax-Deferred Investments, continued

Advantages of this type of investment include:

- Tax deferred growth of investments
- Rebalance investments without accruing taxes
- Investments generally create a tax deduction

Disadvantages of Tax-Deferred investments include:

- Distributions are taxed at ordinary income rates (up to 35%)
- There is limited liquidity for annuities and pre-tax savings plans until the age of 59 ½
- There are Required Minimum Distributions (RMD) at age 73 (qualified plans only)
- Income heirs will be subject to Income In Respect of a Decedent Tax (IRD)

Tax-Free Investments

Investing after-tax dollars in Roth IRAs can create a source of tax-free dollars at retirement.

Advantages of this type of investment include:

- Qualified distributions are tax-free
- Tax deferred growth of investments
- Rebalance investments without accruing taxes
- No Required Minimum Distributions (RMD) at age 73
- Income is not included for purposes of determining whether Social Security benefits are taxable.
- Heirs receive income tax-free

Disadvantages of Tax-Free investments include:

- Contributions are not tax-deductible
- Contributions are subject to income restrictions

Tax Diversification

Taxable

- Qualified Dividends
- Capital Gains on the Sale of
 - Stocks
 - Bonds
 - Mutual Funds
 - ETF
 - Real Estate
 - Crypto Currency
- Other Assets
 - Insurance Products Purchased through Sales Rep
 - Collectibles
 - Checking or Savings

Tax-Deferred

- IRAs
- 401(k) Plans
- 403(b) Plans
- SIMPLE/SEP IRAs
- 457 Plans
- Defined Benefit

Areas of Concern:

Required Minimum Distributions

Beginning the calendar year after the year you turn 73, you are required to withdraw a minimum amount of money from most retirement accounts each year. This minimum withdrawal amount is called a required minimum distribution (RMD). Accounts that require RMDs are ones in which you contributed tax deferred dollars or participated in tax deferred earnings. These include Traditional IRAs, Rollover IRAs, SIMPLE IRAs, SEP-IRAs, most Keogh accounts, and most 401(k) and 403(b) plans. Roth IRAs are excluded from this rule. You cannot use your Roth IRA to meet your RMD requirements. RMD age will increase to 75 for those who turn 74 after December 31st, 2022. If you are still working, you may be exempt from employer sponsored plan RMDs.

Unnecessary Account Fees

All mutual funds charge fees, even no-load funds. Annual Expense Ratio fees are charged to cover the fund's recurring operating costs such as salaries, marketing and overhead. On average this fee is 1.33% annually but can be as high as 15%. You will never notice the fee because it is not included in your monthly statement but is instead hidden in the fund's prospectus. The fee is also stated as a percentage instead of a dollar amount so you will never know the actual amount you are paying.

High Turnover

Today, the average holding period for securities held in a mutual fund is less than a year compared to 40 years ago when the average holding period was five years. Fund managers are no longer concerned about long-term investing but are trying to capture short-term gains through excessive trading called turnover. High turnover generally results in substantial trading costs and any short-term profit gained results in high taxes for the investor. A combination of higher risk, higher fees and higher trading makes high turnover a real concern for shareholders.

Long Term Care Protection

If you are going to require home-health services, adult day-care centers, assisted living facilities or nursing homes at some point in your life, finding the monetary resources to pay for such services can present a dilemma. In 2006, the average cost of private room in a nursing facility was $90,000 per year. Many people are unable to pay such extravagant rates but do not qualify for government assistance. To provide for such care, you can purchase long-term care insurance. As with any type of insurance, you must continue to pay premiums to keep the policy in force. This can turn out to be expensive for many people and some policies only cover a portion of the total expenses. You should consult your insurance advisor as to whether a long-term care policy is appropriate for your situation.

Areas of Concern:

No Coordination of Professionals

It appears that your professionals are not communicating with each other. We believe that the coordination of professionals is key in establishing the correct recommendations.
